STUDENT LIFE:

Freshman Opinions

What was your first impression of JMPHS?

A, Lauri Thigpen: "It's cool that it's the same campus I went to last year. I'm happy that I don't have to learn a new layout."

What are you looking forward to this year?

Freshmen this year are looking forward to homecoming, football games, cheer season, and a fresh start at a new school!

What have you learned so far about high school?

A, Hailey Waldo: "It's not really that big of a deal as people made it out to be. It's not as scary as I expected."

jmphs 2022 Career Fair

Students at JMPHS had the amazing opportunity to speak with ambassadors of local colleges and businesses about opportunities after high school.

HISPANIC HERITAGE MONTH

September 15th to October 15th each year celebrates the history, achievements, and culture of Hispanic Americans. Hispanic culture in America continues to influence and create trends that all Americans take part in. Everything from your favorite foods to the most recent beauty trends take inspiration from Hispanic culture!

TEACHER TIMES: MR. ANDROSKI

BY KILEY MALONE

As we walk around our new campus, it's nice to remind ourselves of those who have been there since the beginning. Mr. Androski has been teaching at JMPHS since its opening. He has been teaching many different levels of mathematics and engineering classes.

Mr. Androski enjoyed all different subjects in school, but mathematics came especially easy to him. Even though he picked it up quite quickly, he didn't know that he would specialize in mathematics until some time later. Mr. Androski first learned that he liked teaching when he was in the navy. There, he was assigned to teach others how to handle emergency situations and he enjoyed this experience. Getting help before it is too late is one of Androski's biggest beliefs. He doesn't want kids to start failing and then realize they could use some tutoring right before the quarter's end. Being the teacher with the most years of work here, Mr. Androski has noticed some things that he loves about JMPHS and a few things that have changed over the years. He likes that the student body has a very small town feel. You get to know everyone on a more personal level than you would at a bigger school. Mr. Androski has noticed big developments in the engineering program and a wider variety of electives to choose from since the opening of JMPHS. His move to the new campus this summer was relatively easy. The most difficult part was keeping all of his engineering gadgets organized between the two campuses.

Outside of school, Mr. Androski likes to do yard work, play golf, and the occasional computer game. Thinking about his frequent late nights, he often considers himself a night-owl. In spite of this, Androski still likes to spend his time outside.

Outside of the classroom, he can often be found listening to classic rock and sometimes country music. While his favorite book is a suspense novel titled “Rebecca” by Daphne Du Maurier, Mr. Androski’s favorite movie is Napoleon Dynamite. He also enjoys taking trips with his family, whether it be fishing or hiking in the mountains.

With this, it should be known that our teachers have personal lives too. They can be quite interesting if you take the time to get to know them. During your time here at JMPHS, you’ll have at least one class with the wonderful and extraordinary, Alan Androski.

TEACHER TIMES: MR. EBBERSON

BY: KILEY MALONE

If you are a returning student of JMPHS, you may have noticed a brand new face or two walking the halls this year. One of which would include our newest teacher Mr. Ebberson. He has taken on teaching our geography, psychology, and agricultural science classes.

Mr. Ebberson started teaching because he would like to see himself as a mentor that shows others how to learn and be productive. His interest in agriculture is mostly due to his time of growing up on a farm and him wanting to share his knowledge. Ebberson's curiosity when it comes to geography started because of his love to travel to other places and the different ways of life that are caused by others' surroundings. During his time in law enforcement, the use of psychology was integrated throughout the investigation process. This later led to his fascination with the topic. Mr. Ebberson believes that if you want to succeed then you should act like the person that you would want if you needed something. Ebberson found it quite easy to adjust to his new position due to his past in law enforcement. Unlike his time as a police officer, he now has set hours for work and his mistakes can't cost anyone their lives. Mr. Ebberson's favorite part of teaching at JMPHS so far is the students' willingness to learn.

Outside of school, Ebberson likes to go camping with his family. They usually go about once a year during the summer time. Just this past year, he and his family spent 13 days away from home. Mr. Ebberson would like to use his free time to go fishing, but he just doesn't have the time. Overall, he would rather do anything outside than staying inside. Ebberson enjoys listening to old rock and old country music. He also likes to spend his time watching his favorite show "Yellowstone" and favorite movie "Top Gun: Maverick." Being a nightowl, Ebberson's nights usually run late into 2 or 3 in the morning.

Overall, there is a lot we can learn from our new teacher this year. He will give our student body more chances to learn from a wider range of subjects. Now, let's give a big welcome to our newest addition, Mr. Ebberson.
