Ripped Jeans, what's the real tear?

By: Allie Wilkerson

High School dress codes are getting stricter by the year, and it is causing quite an uprising with teenagers across the Nation. If this applies to you, then you have caught a bad case of the dress code blues.

If you are a student at James Madison Preparatory High School, you are not allowed to wear jeans with rips above the knee. According to the official 2019-2020 JMPHS Student Handbook, "Students may wear lower garments designed with tears or rips provided such tears or rips are below the knee. Rips/tears above the knee must be patched so no skin is visible. Shorts, tights or any other type of undergarment worn underneath the pants are not considered patches."

JMPHS Principle Mark Akerman commented on the dress code policy concerning ripped jeans during the 10th-grade assembly, "The same dress code was also in place last year," said Akerman. "However, it was not enforced until now." Several students felt strongly that this was an unfair policy and it should be amended.

So what's the real tear? Why the controversy over such a popular style? On the first day of school, I was sent to the office for a dress code violation for ripped jeans. At home my top drawer contained 10 pairs of jeans, eight pairs ripped and two pairs unripped. After one dress code violation, and a trip to the Valdosta Mall my mom was out $165 on jeans. My mom was not entirely pleased about shelling out more money for back-to-school clothes after the fact. However, I was the proud owner of three pairs of unripped dress code friendly jeans.

Let's talk about the facts. When I walked into American Eagle to buy unripped jeans, there were about four pairs of ripped jeans to every one pair of unripped jeans. The same held true with Buckle. So with a style that seems to be taking over the fashion industry, is it fair to hold JMPHS students to such an unreasonable fashion standard? Shouldn't ripped jeans be held to the same standard as skirts, dresses or shorts, which are required to be two inches above the knee. Especially, since ripped jeans cover more of the body than a pair of bermuda shorts, which I would personally never wear.

With schools worldwide opting for a relatively similar dress code, students may have to get resourceful. If you know someone handy with needle and thread, sewing a few stylish patches over the holes may be a cute way to cover rips with flare. Others may wish to completely replace their holey threads at an affordable cost. Online stores like Poshmark and ThreadUp sell new to gently used boutique store brands at low prices. There is always Goodwill, which can be a mecca of fashion if you have hours to roam the racks.

Staying compliant with our current dress code concerning torn jeans is the best way not to get dress coded, which will only cause you to miss class and need a change of clothes. However, maybe the students' voices should be heard. Maybe we should take a look at the real tear and ask that students be allowed to keep it two inches above the knee.

All students, including Seniors, will have a Homeroom added to their schedule this year. Our new Friday schedule will begin on September 13th.

Make sure to find your assigned homeroom on the windows of Ms. Fletcher's office.

Back to School Buzz

By: MaKenzie Myers

Schools across the country are either getting ready to start school or are already in school. Some students are excited about being back at school, while others are not so enthusiastic. Students here at JMPHS also have mixed emotions about being back at school, but they have some pretty good hopes for the upcoming school year.

Our newest additions to the school have added so much energy to our school. Freshmen are normally thought of as the underdogs no one associates with, but they're actually fun to be around and are thrilled to be here. Emma Grace Newmen said that "so far school has been stressful but overall fun," however her goal for this year is just to pass. Ivy Lee said she's "elated to be here but hopes for dress code to get better."

Our sophomores here are ecstatic to be back at school. Even though this is only their second year here, they're starting to feel some of the struggles the upperclassmen feel. Allie Wilkerson said that "being back to school is horrid and that [she's] exhausted all the time, but hopes [her] grades are good for the rest of the school year." Brianna Parker said that "being back isn't too great because I'm tired and have too much homework, but I hope to be able to take college classes next semester."

The juniors here at James Madison are also feeling very stressed to keep their grades on track this year so that a college education is in their future. Tae Hill said "that being back to school has been great and rough at the same time because of all the work teachers give." Even though she feels stressed she hopes to maintain at least a 3.4 GPA this school year.

Our seniors are very excited and sad that this is their last school year. Many of them have bad cases of senioritis. Leah Androski said she's "not ready to leave but she knows has to." Her hopes for this school year is to graduate with all A's and to pass her college classes with A's.

All in all, school is in full swing here at James Madison and the students are happy to be back.

Trendy looks

By: Jasmine Odom

Trends are everywhere right now. You barely see anyone without a scrunchie, ripped jeans, crocs, or vans. These are some of the most trending fashions statements at the moment. People all over the JMPHS campus are wearing these looks. A few students expressed some of their favorite accessories and/or looks.

Ninth grade student, Abby Washington, said that scrunchies were one of her favorite pieces to complete a look. Big and mini sized scrunchies are in style right now. All sizes and colors are worn around campus, typically to match the outfit worn. Scrunchies are usually known to be a hair accessory. Yet, the trend now is to wear them not only in your hair, but on your wrist.

Another very popular style is ripped jeans. You will see almost everyone wearing them not only at JMPHS, but pretty much everywhere. With that being said, this trend IS everywhere but there are a few things you must know before wearing your ripped jeans to school. If your jeans have rips in them, they may be ripped above the knee, BUT they must be patched. Rips worn on or below the knee are just fine.

Footwear is also a big part in completing your trendy look, no outfit is truly complete without the right pair of shoes. There are two very popular options that are very on trend, one of them are Vans. Vans are also everywhere around campus. Specifically checkerboard and solid colors such as grey and white. The most worn version of Vans I have seen around campus are black and white checkerboard.

The other trendy footwear option mentioned before are Crocs. Crocs of all different colors are very on trend. One way to spice up your Crocs is to add Jibbitz (or Croc charms.) These come in different numbers, letters, and animals. Crocs are commonly paired with black ankle socks.

All in all, Different trends and styles make up fashion today. Switching up your style and adding in some of these trends can make for a very interesting outfit. Just remember to stay on top of the trends and love what you wear.

Trends That Need to Stop

By: Brianna Parker

If you haven't noticed, people have been making catchphrases to items trends that need to stop trending. These trends include fashion, media, music, and impersonation.

Fashion used to be all about what you wanted to wear and how you wanted to wear it.

People have recently started wearing outfits, shoes, and other clothing lines that they see on social media instead of what they are actually comfortable with and like to wear.

People don't only wear fashion trends that they see on social media, they are also constantly on social media. The media, outlets, or apps where most of these children pursue are TikTok and VSCO. These apps have been overhyped a lot lately which is why so many people are using them.

I'm sure there are particular songs that you used to love that you hate now because of how much other people play them, how often they are on the radio, and when they are featured on tv shows. They are so overplayed that it's hard to find them enjoyable. Two songs that have been overplayed most recently are Bad Guy by Billie Eilish and Old Town Road by Lil Nas X.

"Anna oop sksksksksksks" is probably something you've been hearing across not only the school but everywhere else It.Is.Not.Cool.Anymore. All boys and girls are doing it and it's not only annoying but is also ruining people's ability to stand out.

7 of the 13 people I have asked want this trend to end just as badly as I do. And if you are choosing to ignore everything I have said please remember to let yourself be unique.

What P. White Thinks Of School

By:Caroline Wynn

James Madison Preparatory High School's enthusiastic History and Speech teacher is now the newest addition to the Administrative Staff as well. Commonly known as P.White, Patrick White is among the helpful teaching staff who both cares and imparts knowledge daily.

P. White is excited to start school, unlike us students. He is eager to come back to school this year, especially since he was promoted to Assistant Principal. He is now also teaching a new class.

Upon reflection about being a student, he said that school safety has changed the most since he was in school. Another thing was society as a whole and the use of technology, especially the use of cell phones!!! He also said that math has changed the least since he was in school. He didn't like it then and he still doesn't like it now. I can't say that I blame him, math is not my best or favorite subject either.

After he graduated from high school, he knew that he wanted to become a teacher. This is P. White's 27th year teaching. He started way back before computers were even relevant. He became a teacher because his entire family are teachers. His grandmother taught high school for 30 years, his mother taught at VSU for 34 years, and his sister retired two years ago after 32 years of teaching. You can basically say that his profession chose him!

Advice from P. White

1. BE YOURSELF! Don't conform to what society says you have to be.
2. Work hard and seek a goal in the future, don't expect anyone or anything to get in your way or be given to you.
3. Nurture the relationships that you develop in this time of your life. Many of them will last a lifetime. Enjoy every minute of it, don't be in such a rush to become an adult.

He hopes that everyone, including students, follows this advice.

Meet The Staff: Mr.Akerman

By: Kate Poirrier

Teachers and staff are a very important part of any school. They provide a pathway of education and skills to your future. They also help feed students, keep the school in working order, and plan events. Sometimes, as students, we forget that teachers have lives, hobbies, and their own fun experiences. Which brings me to my point, the teachers and staff are a big part of our lives. So, we should take the time to learn about their own lives.

The main focus point of this article is the man with the plan, Mr. Akerman. He's from Madison, and he describes himself as handsome, charming, and intelligent. Besides that, this is also his first year with the JMPHS staff, which makes him a great candidate to start with for this series of articles.

The first question we discussed was, "What is something that interests you outside of school?" He said that he loves learning and doing things that involve history. This love he said, was extremely influenced by his father. Who worked as a history professor for 25 years. He himself taught high school and middle school American History and said that his favorite historical events were the founding of Florida with Ponce de Leon and Florida's involvement at the Battle of Gettysburg. He went on to state that he also has an affinity for genealogy (family history) as well.

"What is your favorite joke?" Because of me wearing my favorite FSU shirt, he chuckled and said," You're going to hate me for this, because of your shirt." He was right... just kidding. But now, about a week later, I have learned that a comeback is in order. "My favorite joke is, why did the Seminole cross the road ... because he couldn't cross the goal line." I might have made a face, which if remember correctly he thought it was funny.

Next on the list of questions was, "How are schools today different compared to when you were in school?" He then started to talk about how many more options we have as students in comparison to when he was in school. As well as saying, " I think, and I'm being very serious, people had very high regard for teachers," and that, "People were more involved with their school."

We then talked about, what is his favorite thing was about Madison? To which he replied, "That it's home... and that everyone knows everyone." He said that it's his favorite thing because he learned later in life that his parent's peers were always keeping an eye on him and his friends. More specifically, that they were always watching out for him and his friends to make sure they were making good safe choices. While discussing this he eventually said, " If you raise your children in a big city, like Jacksonville or Atlanta, no one knows your kids.... In towns like Madison, everyone is helping everyone raise their children." He then went further on the subject and said, "It's hard to appreciate until your raising your own children."

One of the more serious questions was, "What is an experience that has really affected you?" It took him a moment, but then he said, " Co-authoring a book with my father, then losing him." He went on to say how it made him appreciate that he got to have that experience with him.

Another question was, "What are you looking forward to this school year?" He replied, " To watch students grow." I later asked in a follow-up interview, if there are any more specific things he was looking forward to. He replied, "Creating new traditions and activities." He also stated that he was looking forward to expanding what is offered to students, as well as being, "... excited about having JMPHS become more of a presence in the community."

At the very end of the interview, I finally asked, "Do you have any advice to give to JMPHS students?" To this, he answered in a very meaningful tone, " Don't get in a hurry to grow up, you have plenty of time, and enjoy your high school experience." As well as, " The friends that you have now, are the friends you will have for life."

Thank you, Mr. Akerman, for letting me interview you. James Madison welcomes you with arms opened wide.

Upcoming Events

School Clubs and Organizations

By: Zhy'Shanti Ware

Here at James Madison Preparatory School (JMPHS) we have a lot of creative things and different activities for students. To be exact we have six clubs/organizations on campus. Here are just a few more details on those interesting extracurriculars!

Most of the clubs here are a part of helping the community or school. For example, we have the Students Working Against Tobacco (SWAT). This particular club is helping students to understand the dangers of smoking, and how it could affect their lungs. Last week these students met during lunch in Mr. Tolar's room. The meeting was to discuss SWAT Student Council and introduce new members. One such member, Kate Poirrer, just joined and is excited to help students and others in the city to learn more about the dangers of tobacco.

Another club is the Beta Club, this club is for 4th through 12th grade students in the United States. The purpose of this club is to promote the ideals of academic achievement, character, and leadership among students (<https://www.betacub.org/about>). The previous meeting was last Friday in Ms. Law's room. A member of the Beta Club, Leah Androski, stated "We talked about the differences about the previous Beta club and what was going to be improved" which will guide future meetings.

In addition to these wonderful clubs, the Future Farmers of America club met with Mr. Walker on August 22, 2019. Students discussed Career Development Events, FFA Jackets, and the list of Agricultural Expos in the area. Lilybeth Wallace said she was excited to go to the meeting and "learn about the C.D.E.'s that she will be able to be involved in this year".

The first SGA/FCA meeting will be held later this month.

JMPHS and Madison County Events

By: Jady Plummer

Even though there isn't much going on this upcoming month, here are some things you might want to put in your calendar. For starters, let's look at the school schedule. There will be no school this Labor Day Monday, September 2, so enjoy the three-day weekend! There will be an early release Thursday, September 19, hallelujah! Remember to keep those grades up, because the first round of progress reports are being handed out on September 12.

Beta meetings at JMPHS are the last Friday of every month, and SWAT's next meeting will be in October.

Many of the students at JMPHS also attend NFC, so events there are probably good to mention as well. Though the yearly theater auditions already took place, practice will begin Sunday, September 8th. The NFC Fitness Center is having a back to school bash September 11 from 11 AM to 12 PM. The club expo at the college is September 17 and 18 from 11 AM to 1 PM if you are interested in joining any clubs.

As for things in Madison and surrounding areas, there are a few events upcoming. The community is decorating for fall with the addition of "Scarecrows in September" in Downtown Madison. Local businesses, Schools, and individuals will participate for a chance to win one of the Top 3 Scarecrows for the 2019 season. Check out the JMPHS Scarecrows! Extreme Pro Wrestling is Saturday, August 31 and will take place in Madison, so check that out if you are interested. In addition, the Flea across Florida will be held September 13th through the 14th. Tallahassee will be holding its 2nd Annual Caribbean Carnival September 13-15, and Perry is having their Smokin' in the Pines BBQ Festival the following weekend, September 20 and 21st.

Don't forget to put some of these in your calendar for a fun filled September!

Sports Near and Far

NFL Headlines

By: Tae Hill

NFL football is off to a great start. There have been a few injuries and a few losses in the preseason but we are still solid. If you don't know what NFL stands for or is, it is the National Football League and it is where football players play professional football at a level higher than any other. They get paid a lot of money for being better at it than the next person. For example defensive tackle rookie Trysten Hill signed a 4 year contract of $4,869,974 including a $1,561,800 signing bonus with $2,278,162 guaranteed, earning an average salary of 1,217,594 in 2019.

The Miami Dolphins had a preseason win over the Jacksonville Jaguars on Thursday. On Tuesday, Coach Brian Flores addressed the decision to play eight straight Jay-Z songs in practice. He stated that it got all of the players hyped up enough to take home the win. "Yeah, I figured I would get this question. So you know after the playlist was done, what you guys don't know is, you know I walked up to Kenny (Stills), in front of the entire group, and said, "This is a challenge to you, to get open, catch the football and make plays for this team."

The Dallas Cowboys have a preseason game against the Houston Texans on August 23. The Cowboys had a Thursday practice that was not all that illuminating, to be perfectly honest.

The Cowboys weren't wearing pads and they were making their final ticks and preparations before their third preseason game.

Good luck Cowboys!

We are all ready for some NFL football as preseason flies by and we are seeing who are really going to be the studs of these teams.

101 NHL

By: Leah Androski

Although we are down in the South, there are still very loyal fans to the National Hockey League (or NHL). As some of you might know the NHL is still in its offseason and will not be playing until the beginning of September. When hockey does start, you will understand more.

All of the professional players, have their style of playing and have dreamed of becoming a pro, which makes it interesting to watch because you never know what is going down. The first time I watched a hockey game, I could hardly keep up with the puck, the guys hit it so fast. After a while, I could see the puck more and I slowly began to understand the sport more. Professional hockey is a fast-paced game and super exciting to watch. Hockey, like football, has many different positions on the ice. There is a goaltender, defenseman, centerman, and many other positions.

The puck is the 'ball' of the sport, the players each have their specific task to do during the game. The players hold a stick in their hands; wear padding, gloves on their hands, and hockey skates on their feet; hockey skates are different from ice skates. All of the players wear helmets also. The goalie wears a lot of different equipment from the rest of the players because they have to block the puck from getting into the goal. Instead of four quarters in the game, they have three periods and intermissions between every period game of playing time. Intermissions are like little breaks with broadcasters talking about what went down during that period.

There are many different teams in the NHL, as you can see in the picture, and many different players playing their way to the Stanley Cup. In NFL every team is in the U.S., but in the NHL some of the teams are in Canada; although most of them are in the U.S. Also, many of the players are older men in their late thirties, unlike in the NFL. The Stanley Cup is a lot like the Super Bowl, they have performers play songs and the two best teams playing against each other. In the Super Bowl, they play one game and whoever wins that wins the Super Bowl, in hockey, the best out of seven games wins the Stanley Cup. They play in seven different games and battle out for a chance to get their team the cup. In September, we will see who is ready to come back and win.

Make sure to check the JMPHS Facebook page and the school website for the most up-to-date information!

Weather Acts

By: Kennedy Franklin

Weather Overview

The latest weather has not been a positive subject. The amount of rain has caused some minor flooding in Madison County and some major flooding in Dixie and Taylor Counties.

Gov. Ron DeSantis has declared a state of emergency Wednesday, August 28th due to Hurricane Dorian. "It's important for all Floridians on the East Coast to monitor this storm closely. Every Florida resident should have seven days of supplies, including food, water and medicine, and should have a plan in case of disaster." DeSantis said in a statement.

So if you know anyone whom this hurricane may affect deeply, please make sure they're prepared for this heavy storm.

Also, a very important part of staying healthy is protecting your skin. The sun can be very harmful to your skin causing you to get sunburned. To prevent this apply sunscreen before going outside in the sun. This will protect your skin from peeling, being dry, and getting burnt.

Lastly, not only should you worry about your own health, you need to make sure others are safe. For example, leaving people or animals in cars. It can only take a few minutes for the car to heat up again without an air conditioner on. This has caused many animals and people to die and is very unsafe. Even if you plan to be gone for a short amount of time it could still end badly.

As you can see, every one of these issues are very dangerous and can be harmful. All of these problems are caused by the heat, so before doing any activity outside make sure to drink water, dress appropriately, apply sunscreen, and don't leave anyone in the hot car.

National News

By: Lily Wallace
CLEMSON, SC (WCTV/WYFF/CNN) A powerful storm in South Carolina sent two people holding onto a tent flying straight into the side of a nearby building. Fortunately both of them are recovering from their minor injuries.

The two employees were working at Esso's Club Sports Bar in Clemson, South Carolina when the storm began. All of the bar's outdoor belongings began blowing away.

The restaurant employees rushed to the outdoor sitting area to tie down the event tent before it was blown away . The Esso's Club employees had sent up the tent earlier that morning for a University event. They were working on tying the tent down when a big gust of wind came lifting it into the air.

The flying tent took two Esso employees with it. One of the employees, Samuel Foster, was lifted high into the air and crashed into the gutter on the roof of the restaurant. Foster had several cuts and bruises. He also had to have stitches above his left eye.

"It took a second to register, but then I'm, like, 20 feet in the air. And all I could think about was, 'I've got to land on this roof,'" Foster said. "I'm really thankful for God looking out for me there. Esso's been really supportive. My friends, my fraternity-- I'm really thankful for all of that."

The second female worker was dragged high into the air, and was hit by an airborne table. She is also recovering from her injuries. There was no damage to the restaurant and they opened the next day. Samuel Foster plans to return to work there, as a cook, soon.

Health Tips

By Abby Washington

Summer is often scorching and so it's very important that people stay safe in these dangerous conditions. Dehydration is very common in summer months especially in warm places like Florida. Dressing appropriately for outside and applying sunscreen is also important for your health.

If the temperature is hot and you are active outside then it's very important that you drink plenty of water. Water gives you energy and helps you do daily activities. When outside in the heat, it can drain your energy and sometimes if it's really bad you may pass out. Sweating outside also causes your body to lose water. So before any activity outside make sure to drink plenty of water.

Another way to stay cool and healthy in the heat is dressing appropriately. Clothes to wear when outside in the heat are thin, light, clothes that aren't dark colors. Athletic clothes are also good for the outside heat. If you wear a thick jacket with jeans and go outside without drinking water, then you will most likely
